A NON-PARTISAN VIEW OF THE LIBERAL CANDIDATE IN LENNOX AND ADDINGTON.

The Utica Globe, which takes an independent view of Canadian politics prints the following despatch from its Ottawa correspondent, in reference to the new Liberal candidate in Lennox and Addington and the reasons why the electors of his home county, irrespective of previous political applications should support him:

Ottawa, April 22.—The Liberals of Lennox and Addington at the recent convention held at Napanee unanimously selected Edward Grange, an old Napanee boy and for the past seven years representative in the capital of the Toronto Globe, as Liberal candidate for the riding for the next Federal general election, which it is expected, will take place in June.

Lennox and Addington has been Conservative for a considerable time, but the Liberals propose entering the forth-coming political fight with an enthusiastic determination to win and redeem the constituency. Honesty, economy and clean statesmanship in the administration of national affairs is the Liberal watchword of the riding and plans have been laid by the Liberal executive for an effective and thorough local organization of their forces.

In the new candidate they have one of the ablest and brightest newspaper men in Canada, one who is thoroughly well informed on all public questions, and who possesses an intimate knowledge of the political history of the country and the men who govern Canada. He was born at Napanee some thirty years ago and graduated with honors from the Collegiate Institute in his native place and also from Victoria University, Toronto, where he had a distinguished scholastic career, taking high honors in both modern languages and history. After graduation he entered the field of journalism and was for a time connected with the editorial staffs of the Toronto News and the Mail and Empire, previous to accepting a position with the Toronto Globe, the leading organ of the Liberal party in Canada. In that year he came to Ottawa as its parliamentary representative and since has acted in that capacity as well as being local Ottawa correspondent for the Halifax Chronicle, the St. John Telegraph, the Montreal Journal of Commerce, the Vancouver World, and the Standard, of London, Eng. He was secretary of the Parliament Press Gallery for three years and he was its president also for two years, 1913-14. He easily stands in the first rank among Canadian newspaper men and his splendid political reports from the Press Gallery here are perhaps the most widely read in the Dominion.

Mr. Grange is entering political life at the personal request of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Liberal leader, and upon pressing and repeated representations from the leading Liberals of Lennox and Addington, where his family has resided for nearly a century. He has accepted the nomination of his home riding, not as a political partisan, but as a young Canadian Liberal anxious and willing to do his part towards elevating the moral standards of political life in this country. He earnestly believes that the things for which Liberalism stand were never of more vital interest to Canadians than at the present moment.

The Liberals of Lennox and Addington could not have secured a better or an abler young Canadian to uphold their banner in that riding. Although the fight will no doubt be a hard one, the friends of Mr. Grange predict that he will be able to carry it to triumph and victory.

The new Liberal candidate in Lennox and Addington is very well known personally in the capital and has hosts of friends here. He has frequently been offered during the last three years important editorial positions on leading city newspapers but he has declined them, preferring to continue his political work here.

He is unmarried, but recently his engagement has been announced to Miss Marion McDougall, a prominent and well-known young lady of the capital, and a daughter of the late respected auditor general of Canada, J. Lorne McDougall. C. M. G.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Council Chamber,
May 3rd, 1915.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening. Mayor Alexander, who is still on the sick list, was absent, and Reeve Denison occupied the chair. Present — Councillors Wiseman, Waller, Carson, Dickinson and Graham. The minutes of the last regular session were read and confirmed. A communication was read from F. W. Barrett, sanitary inspector, calling the council's attention to the drain on south side of the street connecting Centre and Pearl streets. At present the drain is in a foul and offensive condition, and contrary to the Public Health Act. He asked that the matter be attended to at the council's earliest convenience. On motion the Streets Committee were given power to deal with the matter as they find the occasion needs, at a cost to the municipality not exceeding $25.

The usual requisitions from the Board of Education came up before the council and were ordered laid on the table until the estimates were prepared.

Coun. Wiseman, chairman of the finance Committee, presented the regular monthly report from the town treasurer as to the financial standing of the corporation at the end of the last month.

Report adopted. Coun. Graham, chairman of Streets Committee, reported as follows: In the matter of Mr. Towers, reopening of street in Salem, on advice of solicitor no action was taken; as to moving of the gasoline tank, east of the bridge, to Mr. VanLaven's coal yard property to do away with swinging of bridge so frequently, the arrangements had not yet been concluded; as to the question of swinging the bridge when required, Mr. S. R. Miller had consented to do the work, when possible, otherwise he would telephone the chief of Police to come and do it. Report adopted.

Coun. Waller, chairman of Fire Water and Light Committee, presented the following report in reference to a change in the lighting of the streets: 6 arc lamps would be done away with, which at present cost the town $330.00 per year, and 22 incandescent lamps would be installed instead, which would also cost $330, but it was thought the incandescent lights would be by far the most beneficial. The two arc lamps on the Newburgh road would be replaced by seven incandescent lamps; 1 arc lamp in Clarksville replaced by four incandescent lights, and one placed on the brow of Roblin's hill on the Kingston road; 2 arc lamps on Water Street, replaced by four incandescent lamps, and one incandescent lamp on the Belleville road.

On motion the report, which was signed by all the Committee, was adopted.

On motion it was decided to fix the date for Nananee's Civic Holiday on July 7th.

On motion D. Pizzariello was employed as caretaker of The Harvey Warner Park for the year 1915, salary and conditions same as last year.

LONDON, May 4.—The Admiralty issued the following statement last night: "After the destroyer action

Saturday a strenuous attempt was made to rescue the German sailors floating in the sea. Lieut. Wartell jumping into the water himself rescued a German. In consequence, 10 officers and 44 men out of a crew of 59 were picked up and saved.

The German prisoners stated that they had sunk a British trawler before being sighted by the Laforey, and had picked up a lieutenant and 10 men. It is stated that a torpedo was fired at the Daisy, which was forced to leave one of her rescue boats behind, and that the submarine chased a boat and fired her gun at it, sinking four men.

GREAT ADVANCE MADE

British Now Hold Neck of Gallipoli Peninsula.

Correspondent Says Allies Have Occupied Karadag and Important Land Engagements Are In Progress—Forcing of Straits Cannot Now Be Delayed Very Long—Shelling Fierce and Incessant.

LONDON, May 4.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Sofia telegraphs that the allies in their campaign on the Peninsula of Gallipoli have occupied Karadag. The Mail suggests that this name is identical with Kurudagh on the north neck of the Gallipoli Peninsula, and it assumes that the force that occupied this place is that which landed at Enos from the Gulf of Saros.

According to the Daily Mail's Athens correspondent unconfirmed reports from Tenedos state that important engagements are in progress on the peninsula. The Turks are said to be strongly entrenched in positions defended with barbed wire entanglements. It is stated that among the prisoners taken by the allies there are many Christians who were forced to enlist in the Turkish army.

Some British officers are reported to have expressed the opinion that the forcing of the straits will not be long delayed owing to the renewed vigorous shelling of the forts by the allied fleet.

The landing of British troops continues at two new unnamed points in the peninsula. The forts defending Maldoes are said to have been destroyed by a bombardment from the land side, and the British advance force is said to have captured Maldoes after it had been practically destroyed by shells. The Turkish losses were very great at this point.

Reports from Dadeagatch state that the steamers Magda and Virginia have been captured outside the port by warships of the allies, and their cargoes of goods destined for Turkey have been seized.

Reports from Athens assert that the bombardment of the Dardanelles forts by the fleets and the fighting ashore continued hotly on April 30 and May 1. Many forts, the despatches declare, were severely damaged and their fire is weakening, some of them being silenced entirely. The town of Dardanelles, according to these advices, has been totally destroyed.

The progress of the allied armies is reported to be considerable at all points, and 900 Turks, the despatches say, have been captured. The invaders, after violent fighting, now occupy Gabatepe Hill, behind Kildil Bahr, dominating the whole peninsula.

The landing of four thousand French troops on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles last Sunday was executed for the exclusive purpose of facilitating the occupation by British troops of Sedd-el-Bahr, a town on the European side of the straits.

As soon as these operations were completed, the French, according to these advices, returned to their transports and proceeded for an unknown destination.

Austro-German Blow at Russian Left Succeeds.

General Mackenzen's Vigorous Offensive East of Cracow Is Reported In Berlin and Vienna to Have Crushed the Russian Wing—Germans Are Still Striving to Break Through Line to Calais.

LONDON, May 4.—News came through last night from Berlin and Vienna of an Austro-German victory in Galicia, but the report has not yet been confirmed. Desperate efforts to turn the flanks of the Russians have hitherto ended in failure, but a drive against the Russian right in western Galicia, according to the reports of the enemy, has succeeded in piercing the Russian flank along the Valley of the Dunajec. The German official despatch claims that 8,000 Russians were taken prisoners. The opinion here is that this new move may prove to be a serious check to the Russian advance in the Carpathians. Berlin is celebrating the victory to-night, as is the custom there, though it is admitted that the flags have been flown before full details are to hand.

The line between the Vistula and the Hungarian frontier was about 40 miles east of Cracow. The Austro-Germans have been defending it stubbornly ever since the beginning of the Carpathian fighting.

The general British comment is somewhat reserved pending the Petrograd version of the operations.

The movement in western Galicia is probably of the greatest importance of any action since General Von Hindenburg's great drive in the north.

The Russian army in the Carpathians is in imminent danger of being cut off. The Russians have gained the southern slopes of the

FLOATING ISLANDS.

Japan Has a Lake of Them, and They Sometimes Capsize.

In Yamagata, Japan, is a small lake called the Lake of the Floating Islands, discovered about the year 1340, which has from that time attracted the attention of many poets and literary men. A report on the mysterious movements of these islands, drawn up by a party under Professor S. Kusakabe, is published in the science reports of the Tohoku Imperial university.

The floating islands, which at times number no fewer than sixty, are found to be continually changing their positions, moving first one way and then the other. In the first series of observations wooden floats were placed in the lake, showing the distribution of the various currents. Subsequently a model of the lake was constructed, and it was found possible closely to reproduce the various movements of the surface. When both water and wind currents were taken into account the actual behavior of the islands was found to be quite in accordance with

THIRTEEN VESSELS SUNK.

German Submarines in British Waters Become More Active.

LONDON, May 4.—Eight more vessels were yesterday reported sunk by German submarines in the North Sea. Of the eight destroyed four were Norwegian steamers, one was Swedish and three were British trawlers. The loss of life, which is confined to the crews of the trawlers, was light.

The Norwegian steamer Baldwin was sunk by a German submarine in the North Sea on Sunday.

The members of the crew, numbering seventeen men, were allowed to take to their boats. Yesterday they landed at Leith.

Nine shots were fired into the Baldwin before she went down.

The enemy was unusually active on Saturday last, sinking five steamers, three in the English Channel and two off the coast of Ireland. The total loss of life is not known. Two of the victims were British, one an American, one French and one Russian.

The feature of the commerce raiders' work was the sinking of the American oil tank steamer Guildlight. As the vessel is owned in a neutral country, it will not fail to cause serious friction between the United States and Germany.

miles east of Cracow. The Austro-Germans have been defending it stubbornly ever since the beginning of the Carpathian fighting.

The general British comment is somewhat reserved pending the Petrograd version of the operations.

The movement in western Galicia is probably of the greatest importance of any action since General Von Hindenburg's great drive in the north.

The Russian army in the Carpathians is in imminent danger of being cut off. The Russians have gained the southern slopes of the main ridge and have worked their way well into the eastern Beskids through Dukla and other smaller passes.

Regarding the operations on the western battlefield the London Daily Mail's correspondent in Rotterdam telegraphs as follows.

"The Germans continue their attempts to creep forward towards Ypres. They attacked southeast of St. Julien Sunday, but met with a fierce resistance at the hamlet of Fortuin. They have made desultory attacks northeast of Ypres and also against French troops.

"There is no sign that the Germans intend to abandon the offensive now that they have had time to rest and to bring up fresh troops. Despite the appalling losses which they suffered in the grim struggle for possession of the road to Calais, they have not turned from their purpose.

"A German observation balloon which drifted across the frontier near Sluys and was brought down by the fire of Dutch soldiers, was found to be unoccupied."

The wind on Saturday broke, almost by itself, the German attack on Hill 60, which had been timed to coincide with artillery fighting west of St. Julien. The Germans liberated fumes, which, however, floated back behind the front of the German trenches.

The floating islands, which at times number no fewer than sixty, are found to be continually changing their positions, moving first one way and then the other. In the first series of observations wooden floats were placed in the lake, showing the distribution of the various currents. Subsequently a model of the lake was constructed, and it was found possible closely to reproduce the various movements of the surface. When both water and wind currents were taken into account the actual behavior of the islands was found to be quite in accordance with theory and experiment.

The islands originate from masses of vegetable debris, which are first carried to the surface by bubbles of gas; then reeds commence to grow from seed on them. Sometimes the mass becomes topheavy and overturns, and reeds grow on the other side, until the island has grown sufficiently large in extent to secure stability.

TEST OF A TOASTMASTER.

His Speech, Whether It Be Good or Bad, Should Be Very Brief.

To the average man an invitation to "make a few remarks" after dinner is at once a terror and a secret pride. To be asked to be the toastmaster at a big dinner is usually taken as recognition of wit and knowledge.

The toastmaster's speech should be very brief. If he is a good speaker himself a speech of any considerable length imposes unfair competition upon the real speakers, usually visiting guests, whom he is to introduce. If the toastmaster is a poor speaker he bores the audience and the waiting guests as well. And in any event every minute occupied by the toastmaster is a robbery of the time of the real speakers of the evening, and an after dinner speaker may have a real message that needs delivery, and the long drawn introduction, with side lights and anecdotes, will really cheat the audience of something worth while.

The toastmaster has a task of courtesy—to prepare the diners for the man who is to speak, to tame and train the audience into a proper frame of mind and to turn it over to the speaker informed as to his identity, prejudiced in his favor a little perhaps, but certainly not in the reaction following a laugh raised by the toastmaster.—Boston Globe.

WILD GOOSE LIFE.

The Gander is a Master of Strategy and a Fierce Fighter.

We know nothing of the courtship of the wild goose, but we feel assured that it must be a seemly and worthy affair. Once mated, there is no further need for vows and protestations, for the birds mate for life. Together they unite in building the nest, but the goose alone watches over the eggs, while day and night the gander weaves in all directions on water and on land his trails of watchfulness.

Neither man nor beast may approach without being fiercely and successfully assailed, buffeted and routed by a relentless attack with beak and wings. This guardianship is trebled when the new generation, helpless and dependent, voices its first need for protection from the perils which encompass and beset it.

If, perchance, the small family elects to remain on the shore the parents will circle round and round the group of golden goslings, and if danger threatens from any one direction the gander, by some miracle of strategy, will succeed in placing himself at the one vulnerable point of his intrenchment. His loyalty, astuteness and unselfishness are not to be found in those unobservant folk who have presumed to slander him.

In swimming the strictest discipline is maintained. The young form in single file, following the mother, while the gander brings up the rear, with eyes constantly sweeping the whole range of vision. His vigil is ceaseless and untiring.

Such is the life of these two birds that are mated in more than sex, and when death comes to one or the other of them we know that many times the one that remains will seek no other mate, but will return each spring to the site of his former nest, which he will never renew again.—Atlantic.

DISGRACED THE SENTINEL.

For Not Killing the Army Chief Who Had Struck Him.

In France in the seventeenth century the office of sentinel was a very solemn charge, and a part of the sentinel's duty was to resent and punish any affront. The severity of this punishment was in proportion to the high importance of his office. A Frenchman relates an incident illustrative of this fact:

In 1622 M. de Marillac rode away on horseback from an audience with the king. His horse stepped on a sentinel's foot. The man struck the horse, which leaped forward and shook M. de Marillac in his saddle.

The rider turned and struck the sentinel. The soldier belonged to the company of M. de Goas, who when he heard of this had him arrested and imprisoned. He himself set out, sword in hand, in search of M. de Marillac to demand satisfaction for an insult to his sentinel.

The king was informed of the incident and sent for M. de Goas and M. de Marillac. He reprimanded de Marillac severely, told him that the sentinel should have killed him and forbade him to exercise his command as chief marshal for six days.

The sentinel was tried before a council of war and was sentenced to a penalty for not killing de Marillac to be deprived of his arms in the presence of his regiment and to be tortured by the strappado—that is, to be hoisted by a rope to a beam and let fall. The king pardoned the man, but M. de Goas would not have him in his company again.—Washington Star.

Paddled Away in a Coffin.

Several men have succeeded in escaping from Devil's Island, where Captain Dreyfus was confined. One bold prisoner escaped from his cell during a dark night and forced his way into a shed where coffins were made. Selecting a large shell, he nailed the lid down in such a way that a hole was left big enough for him to crawl into. Then he added a storehouse and stole a supply of food, which he placed inside the coffin. His next proceeding was to drag the coffin and its contents down to the water's edge. Reaching it in safety, he launched his sepulchral vessel, crawled into it and paddled away by means of his hands. Devil's Island never saw him again.

ARE YOU GOING TO ENLIST?

A Sermon preached by the Rev. J. H. H. Coleman, Vicar of St. Mary Magdalene Church, Napanee, Sunday, May 2nd, 1915.

"We have heard of the pride of Moab, 'that he is very proud; his loftiness, 'and his pride and his arrogance, 'and the haughtiness of his heart. 'I know his wrath saith the Lord 'that it is nought; his boastings 'have wrought nothing."

Jeremiah Xviii 29, 30.

The story which the Official Eyewitness has sent to Canada of the great battle in which her sons did so valiantly, is a story to thrill the heart and to bring to the eye tears of mingled grief and joy—grief for the many fallen, joy that our brothers acquitted themselves so nobly.

At the memorial service held on Thursday last in Ottawa, on Parliament Hill, Rev. Dr. Herridge spoke thus:—"We are persuaded that instead of deterring others from seeking to share their peril, this baptism of blood will arouse amongst us a still deeper consciousness of national duty, and will incite our youth to prepare themselves to emulate that zeal of their comrades across the sea, that they, too, may have a part in this great conflict, which is not simply a conflict between opposing hosts drawn up in battle array, but between opposing ideals and purposes; a conflict the issue of which will decide, in the years to come, the tone and quality of modern civilization."

"Let us not say then brave men who fell are dead. They are not dead. Their deeds will live. Their memory will live. The patriotic enthusiasm which they have evoked will live. They have quickened the pulse of the whole of Canada. They have broadened the meaning of the British Empire. And upon that awful field and the glare of cannon, so far from being annihilated they have been lifted into the glorious light of sudden immortality."

Will the speaker's prophecy come true? Will the splendid heroism of our brothers incite our young men to emulate their zeal? Will the long casualty lists encourage recruiting? Yes, if—it is an important "if"—if the young men of Canada to-day have the true, loyal, courageous spirit which has ever animated the men of the British race. It has always been that 'while we are perhaps a little slow in imagination, and we don't realize easily a situation not under our eyes, yet when we do realize it, when we know that the post of peril is the post of duty, we don't flinch from it. Recruiting in England was slow until was 'shocked into a realization of her need by some of the losses and reverses of the early weeks of the war. After that the men of England pressed forward with eagerness to "do their bit" for their country, at whatever cost to themselves. Will Canadians be found wanting now that the same spur is being applied to us? We cannot think so.

zation of her need by some of the losses and reverses of the early weeks of the war. After that the men of England pressed forward with eagerness to "do their bit" for their country, at whatever cost to themselves. Will Canadians be found wanting now that the same spur is being applied to us? We cannot think so. I have been asked, and the request comes from those who have a right to make it, to bring before any men of military age whom my words may reach, the call to arms which their king and country make to them at the present time. It is with a heavy sense of responsibility that I comply with the request. But we must all brace ourselves to do things from which we might shrink, if they are clearly in the line of duty. And it does seem to be the duty of the Church to press upon men's minds the call which the present crisis brings to us. It is true that the church is the servant of Him who is the Prince of Peace. But, as a practical question, what better contribution can the Church make towards restoring peace to the war stricken world, than the contribution of her sons' to the gigantic task of crushing that power which delights in war and is a menace to the peace and freedom of the world.

In olden times the Israelites had a neighbor, a tribe known as Moab, living to the south east of them. The Moabites had become strong and prosperous, and Jeremiah tells us that the spirit of militarism had taken possession of them. They said "we are mighty and strong men for the war." They became a menace to their neighbors. The text tells of their pride and arrogance and haughtiness. They were war-mad. They lust to destroy and to conquer. They were embroiling the nations around them with wars and fightings; they were seeking to enslave those who were free by their usurpation and arbitrary power.

What was God's will then for His people Israel? Must peace be maintained with perfidious and cruel invaders, at the expense of prosperity, honor, life, and freedom? No, in such a time the Providence of God called to His ancient church, "to arms." Jeremiah predicts the defeat of Moab. Moab's boastings have wrought nothing. "Give wings unto Moab that it may flee and get away: for the cities thereof shall be desolate." But as always, men are called upon to co-operate with God in order to carry out His good purposes for them. And so Jeremiah cries out to the men of Israel, Cursed be he that doeth the work of the Lord negligently; and cursed be he that keepeth back his sword from blood."

Strong language, that Jeremiah must have been thoroughly convinced that the cause of Israel was a righteous cause, or he would not have used it. And he must have felt that there was need for every available man on the Lord's side, and every energy on the part of every available man.

We to-day are convinced that our cause is righteous. I can take that for granted. As the war goes on we realize more and more that it is a spiritual contest "between opposing ideals and purposes, a conflict the issue of which will decide, in the years to come, the tone and quality of modern civilization." It is not that we hate the Germans—God forbid that we let ourselves be led on into that—not that we fight for commercial supremacy, or for possessions, or for revenge. It is for us a war against war, against hate, against the doctrine that might is right, against godless materialism, against the perversion of culture and intellect and science to purposes which are devil-will leave it at that.

But to parent, wives and friends may I add these words? If some of you love thinks it his duty to go, I were lest you discourage him: for obeying what is God's call to him. If you do you may regret it for the rest of your life. Does it mean sacrifice? Yes, it is a heavy burden which is being borne by the mothers, the fathers, the wives, the friends, who their loved ones go into such hardships and peril. But it is far better to accept that sacrifice, hard though it is, than to stifle the Divine impulse which leads a young man to choose the fine, the heroic, the manly course. Are the women of Canada not as brave, not as true to the selves as the women of France, as the women of Germany, as the mothers of our own race in days gone by? I am sure that they are. With bleeding hearts, but proudly smiling face they will bid God-speed to their dear ones as they fare on their crusade for God and for the right. For the love is not a selfish one, holding "comfort, content, delight." They want their sons and their husbands and their lovers above all things to play the man, to be worthy of the pride and of their love.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, May 3.—Prospects of a bountiful and early harvest turned out to be too much of a handicap today for supporters of wheat. In consequence, the market, notwithstanding a display of power to rally, closed heavy at  $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ to $\frac{1}{8}$ ¢ net decline. Corn finished 1¢ to $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ down, oats off  $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ to  $\frac{1}{8}$ ¢, and provisions unchanged to  $\frac{1}{8}$ ¢ lower.

Corn sagged more constantly than wheat. Excellent field conditions and larger receipts were chiefly responsible.
Shipping demand, altho said to have improved somewhat, was on the whole undeniably slow. Oats weakened under hedging against new crop purchasing to arrive. Rains east gave an additional advantage to the bears.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE IS IT REASONABLE?

"Come, Let Us Reason Together, Saith Jehovah."

Remarkable Growth of This Cult—Its Adherents—Their Realization of a Supernatural Power — An Outgrowth of Present Conditions —Are Its Teachings Logical?—
Some Perplexing Problems.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Bing ham ton,
N. Y., April 25.—
Pastor Russell's discourse here today was based upon the text, "Come
now, let us reason
together, saith
Jehovah; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow." — Isaiah
1:18.

The sermon began with the statement that what a man believes is his own business,
and not subject to public criticism;
but that when a body of people associate themselves, publish their doctrines to the world and invite members, they lose the individual privilege, and their doctrines are open to public criticism. But doctrines alone may be criticized, and they should be honestly treated, not misrepresented.
The speaker assumed that Christian Scientists would appreciate what he had to say. He trusted that he always had this attitude toward criticism leveled against his public teachings.

The Pastor then traced the remarkable growth of Christian Science. Its teachings appeal to a very intelligent class of people — a well-to-do class, of considerable mental independence.
So far as he has conversed with Christian Scientists, he finds that physical healing seems more or less associated with their conversion to their cult.
Either themselves or their friends have been healed. Their realization of the cure convinced them that there is a supernatural power outside of man, and aroused religious sentiment such as they had never before known.
They seemed to have started a new life.

Bewildered Christendom.

The reason for this is that nominal
Christianity is merely a form of god-liness, without power or conviction, which has spread to such an extent that the whole world is styled Christendom—Christ's Kingdom. Additionally, during the last fifty years a sincere class of Christians have been greatly perplexed because of the stupendous nonsense, intermingled with Truth, which was handed down to us from the Dark Ages. Under the increasing light, thinking people could not swallow some of the monstrous statements of the creeds
as readily as did their forefathers;
and each denomination has found it necessary to say little about its creed.
Thus people are bewildered as to the differences between the various denominations; and many have concluded that the only difference is in forms, ceremonies, etc.

The doctrine that God had foreordained 999 out of every 1,000 to an eternity of torture in fire became too horrible to believe. The alternative doctrine, that God did not foreordain matters thus, but had not the wisdom or the power to avoid such a

I had a place in my right side that was

PRESENCE OF MIND.

It Saved General de Segur From the Fury of the Kalmucks.

In Napoleon's campaign in Russia
one of his generals, Philippe de Segur, had a peculiar adventure with a band of Kalmucks. The Kalmucks are wandering tribes of southeastern Russia.
They are fierce warriors, and their light cavalry forms an important part of Russian armies. De Segur's presence of mind saved him from being killed by them when the most desperate fighting could not have done so.

The French had attacked a body of Russians and put them to flight, when Segur suddenly discovered that he and a few French dragoons had become separated from the French army and were being carried away with the retreating party.

He and his men were surrounded by a band of Kalmucks. The situation seemed so hopeless that the men gave themselves up and, disregarding his orders, passively allowed themselves to be struck down. De Segur determined to sell his life dearly and continued to fight. A Kalmuck lance struck him from his horse. He jumped to his feet and, getting behind his horse, continued the struggle. It was a hopeless contest, however, and in a few moments he would have been killed had

But to parent, wives and friends, say I add these words? If someone you love thinks it his duty to go, beware lest you discourage him from obeying what is God's call to him. If you do you may regret it, for the rest of your life. Does it mean sacrifice? Yes, it is a heavy burden which is being borne by the mothers, the fathers, the wives, the friends, who see their loved ones go into such hardships and peril. But it is far better to accept that sacrifice, hard though it is, than to stifle the Divine impulse which leads a young man to choose the fine, the heroic, the manly course. Are the women of Canada not as brave, not as true to themselves as the women of France, as the women of Germany, as the mothers of our own race in days gone by? I am sure that they are. With bleeding hearts, but proudly smiling faces, they will bid God-speed to their dear ones as they fare on their crusade for God and for the right. For their love is not a selfish one, holding to comfort, content, delight. They want their sons and their husbands and their lovers above all things to lay the man, to be worthy of their pride and of their love.

Gone! Brother-lover-son! Gone forth to certain peril, toil, and pain, and chance of death—for country counted gain, but part to let them go; to say "Not one

Would we hold back;" to give our heart's best treasures to our Motherland, though the gift break them; firm of lip and hand to bid farewell; to say, "Be strong, and live or die deserving." Who shall deem our part the easier? or the place we hold—patience for courage, for the deed and dream—waiting for action—service slight or cold?

What shall we give them? Fear? Tears least of all! Shame not their valor so—honor and manhood call them—let them go, for make farewell twice parting by your tears,

O women's heart be strong, too full for words—too humble for a prayer—too faithful to be fearful!—offer here our sacrifice of patience. Not for long be darkness. When the dawn of peace breaks bright, blessed she who welcomes whom her God shall save; but honored in her God's and country's sight he who lifts empty arms to cry, "I gave!"

Another Trawler, Victim.

LONDON, May 3.—The trawler Lily Dale has been sunk by a German submarine in the North Sea, 75 miles off the mouth of the River Tyne. A patrol boat picked up the crew of the trawler and then went in chase of the submarine. The submarine, however, made its escape.

monstrous statements of the creeds as readily as did their forefathers; and each denomination has found it necessary to say little about its creed. Thus people are bewildered as to the differences between the various denominations; and many have concluded that the only difference is in forms, ceremonies, etc.

The doctrine that God had fore-ordained 999 out of every 1,000 to an eternity of torture in fire became too horrible to believe. The alternative doctrine, that God did not fore-ordain matters thus, but had not the wisdom or the power to avoid such a catastrophe for His creatures, became equally repugnant. Consequently preachers began to tell that the destiny of humanity was not literal fire, but gnawing of conscience, etc.—each preacher manufacturing a Hell in accordance with his own wisdom or ignorance.

Under these conditions Christian Science was born. Three things especially favored it: (1) its acceptance of the Bible; (2) its rejection of everlasting torment; (3) its teaching of Divine healing. Mrs. Eddy, its acknowledged head, had a keen mind and considerable wisdom in its exercise. She held to the Bible, though she perverted its teachings. She laid stress on healing, and settled all doctrinal difficulties with the dictum that there is no evil, there is no sin, there is no death; that what have been so called are merely errors of the mind.

The very absurdity of some of these statements advertised them. At first people said, Absurd! Later they said, We will see how Christian Science explains death, sickness, pain, sin. Thus curiosity led them into the metaphysical labyrinth which Mrs. Eddy had constructed. Having no intelligent knowledge of the Bible, they were in condition to fall an easy prey to "Mother Eddy's" errors.

Is Christian Science Logical?

The Pastor then discussed some problems which Christian Science presents to all logical minds. This cult declares that there is no death, and that whoever dies merely commits "mortal error." The fact that for six thousand years mankind have died is surely against this theory. If everybody commits "mortal error," everybody dies. Even "Mother Eddy" finally succumbed. The speaker wondered what solution Christian Science offers for this problem.

Again, if disease is error, if death is the greatest of errors, and if the escaping of "mortal error"—death—brings everlasting life, how do our Christian Science friends expect to get everlasting life, when at the last moment of their trial they make failure? The corollary would be hopeless death to all mankind. In this conclusion the Bible agrees: "The wages of sin is death." Sin brings "mortal error"—death.

Broken Glass.

To pick up little pieces of broken glass wet a woollen cloth, lay it on the floor where the fragments are and pat it. The little particles will adhere to the damp cloth.

Purifying the Air.

A pitcher of cold water placed on the table of an occupied room will absorb all the gases with which the room is filled from the respiration of those eating or sleeping in it. In a few hours this pitcher of pure water will make the air of the room pure, while the water itself will become totally unfit for use.

were being carried away from the treating party.

He and his men were surrounded by a band of Kalmucks. The situation seemed so hopeless that the men gave themselves up and, disregarding his orders, passively allowed themselves to be struck down. De Segur determined to sell his life dearly and continued to fight. A Kalmuck lance struck him from his horse. He jumped to his feet and, getting behind his horse, continued the struggle. It was a hopeless contest, however, and in a few moments he would have been killed had not a happy thought occurred to him.

The Kalmuck leader, a fine looking Cossack, remained calm while his men were carried away with the fury of battle. The expression on his haughty countenance indicated that he scorned to murder a vanquished foe, and from time to time he called, "Nikale, nikale!" De Segur guessed that this was an order to cease fighting. He shouted imperiously to the Kalmucks that surrounded him, "Nikale!"

Immediately the fury died out of their faces, and they paused, motionless with astonishment. Their fury once checked, Segur's life was saved by their chief.

He learned afterward that the word meant "Do not strike" and that while the impetuous Kalmucks had not heeded the command of their chief they were puzzled and disturbed at hearing this word of their native dialect from the mouth of one whom they supposed to be an enemy.

De Segur was kept a prisoner until a peace between France and Russia was arranged some months later.—Exchange.

German Helmets.

German military helmets, though made of steel, are as light almost as a cloth cap or a straw hat, and more comfortable than a bowler. Round the inside, where the helmet touches, is a ring of metal "leaf springs" bound with leather, which lightly clips the head to keep the helmet on without heavy pressure. The brass spike or knob that crowned the helmet is made useful as well as ornamental. There are large holes in it, which give very good ventilation to the inside of the helmet—much better than the pinholes that are supposed to ventilate a bowler. In fact, the Germans seem to have succeeded in making a really comfortable bowler out of paper thin steel.—Manchester Guardian.

A Military Compliment.

During the South African war an order was issued to the men of the Highland regiments that they must cover up their tartan kilts as they made too good targets for the enemy. The order proved very unpopular and caused a great deal of dissatisfaction among the soldiers concerned. When Sir George White heard this he thought of a way out of the difficulty.

"Let them cover up only the front of their kilts," he said. "The enemy will never see the other side."—London Answers.

"Cranks" Catalogued.

A catalogue of murderers is one of the curiosities in the offices of the United States secret service in Washington. In this catalogue all the "cranks" in this country are listed, first alphabetically under their names and aliases and, secondly, under the particular forms taken by their obsessions. The catalogue is kept up by contributions from the police of every town and city where a crank is found.

FROM NAPANEE SOLDIERS

France, April 15th.

Dear Father :—

Just a line. Hope you are well. I wish you could send me something to smoke—some Old Chum, if you don't mind. I will give you some news of myself now. I am feeling fine having a good time, and just now I am having a rest, in fact all our battery are having a rest, but we hope to get into action again soon. None of our bunch have had a scratch so far. We do all work in the mornings and play all afternoon. In the sports this afternoon I won a riding match. It was a fine contest, and the winner had to do some pretty fine riding. We ran around a course, with four jumps in it, and as we ran in pairs, and had to keep right in line with our partners you will understand we had to "ride our horses." The rules of the contest were like this: If a foot came out of a stirrup, you lost two marks; if you spoke to your horse, you lost three marks; if your horse touched the barrier when he jumped, three more points were lost. It was possible to get forty marks in the race. The winners were as follows: Sergt. C. A. Cornwall and Bombardier F. Flucher, 1st; Bombardier R. Mann and Bert Beaubieu, 2nd; Driver Vivien and Driver C. Clare, 3rd. There were about twenty others who started, but they did not count for anything as far as the match was concerned. I lost in the singles, but won in the section jumping. When you do the best out of a bunch of about 150 men you feel pretty well satisfied. Please remember me to all the boys, and give my best regards to all the family. I am looking forward to being home again soon, and see you, and stay for Christmas dinner. I think this will be all for this time. Best regards to all.

SIKH SOLDIERS.

Some of Them Are Trained to War Almost From Babyhood.

One may often see in the English illustrated periodicals photographs of tiny soldiers about seven or eight years old gravely saluting elderly officers. These diminutive warriors are boy recruits holding regular and dignified places in the Indian army. Each Sikh regiment is allowed twelve of these little chaps, who are trained almost from babyhood. They are each paid 3 rupees and 8 annas a month and at the age of sixteen enter the regular army.

The Sikh soldiers are a most interesting and remarkable part of the British army in India. Their conduct in frontier engagements has distinguished them as brave, steady and devoted to their English officers. Yet about fifty years ago these well ordered soldiers were fanatical savages, who in their mad uprisings shook the power of Great Britain. Once conquered they accepted British rule and were trained and disciplined into a well equipped army of 30,000 soldiers. They formed part of the force that subdued the mutiny. The Hodson's horse troops, which helped capture Delhi, were composed of Sikhs whose devoted service to their leader made them famous.

Their scarlet sashes and turbans gained them the name of "Flamingos." Their descendants are no less determined fighters and staunch soldiers.—Chicago Herald.

Mr. Robt. Johnston writes from somewhere in Belgium on April 19th—
My Dear Dad :—

I received your letter, the first I have had for two months. I think the war is nearing the end. The Germans are weakening very fast. They are trying to retaliate to-day for what we gave them the night before last also last night. I might say we did give them H—o-bill as success was great I can tell you in about six hours we captured three miles of trenches, the great canal and a big hill which we tunneled right through. The Germans have a trenched place here where they stick the dead Germans up in them to draw our fire. It is absolutely not necessary for them to do it as we don't take advantage of that out here. This country is in a terrible shape here, all blown to pieces.

We have had a number of narrow escapes. For every shell they give us out guns retaliate with three.

I saw an aeroplane brought down from over our lines, it was a German. The day before we brought down three of theirs. In the fight yesterday a British airman got right on top of him with his aeroplane and used his machine gun on the German, it was fun to see him come down.

Our artillery has a good name here, I can tell you. Two days ago the French moved one of their batteries and the day following the Germans shelled the old position with about thirty shells but there was nothing there for them to hit but an old building.

The only thing we fear is their snipers when we are out fixing our lines at night. In some places the German trenches nearly touch ours. They are eight to ten yards apart.

I am quite well excepting I can hardly speak with a cold. Don't worry about me at all. I am all right here. Excuse writing as this is being written in the trenches.

Dear Sir,—We are pleased to advise you that we duly received on the 14th of December, 1914, the bale of clothing, which you were kind enough to forward to our relief work for the victims of the war in Belgium.

We were very grateful indeed to you for this splendid gift and we would ask you to kindly thank, in our name all the generous contributors for their kind efforts in alleviating suffering and distress in devastated Belgium.

We trust that you will pardon the delay in acknowledging receipt of these goods, but as we had not been advised by you of the shipping of same, we had to have recourse to the Station Agent, in order to secure your name.

Yours faithfully,

CANADA'S NOBLE SONS.

"A Tribute To Those Who Have Recently Fallen."

(A. Irene Cowan)

Thro' shot and shell, in that lowly dell,
Our sons, brave sons, to earth fell!
Scorched under the firing line,
Bruised, by Satan's ugly sword,
Wounded! Sounds the dire chord!

Like a dirk, came the sad despatch,
Death is written on every door latch!
Canada mourns. She's rent in twain,
And grieves o'er the noblest slain!
Thousands of hearts burst in anguish,
And wonder whither their loved ones
[anguish?

But Honour and Truth, swell the land,
The flag of the red, white and blue,
[flies in every hand!

With joy and pride, we swell the tide,
That Canada stands aloft on every [side,

And her sons,—for her welfare they [died!

We'll may the Sun of Righteousness [shine,
On this dear land, whose truth is [sublime;

Well done, to those, our noble recruits,
Whose faith in Canada, was their last [wish to pursue.

Their hopes abide supreme, as the [glowing sun,
We chant, well done, well done, to [our valiant sons!

O Canada, our hearts glow for thee!
Thy sons died for the cause of Right[eous liberty!

O thy name is like fire and flame,
Thou hast won the truest fame.
Thy doors ope wide to gather stricken [homes in,

Thy heart is magnanimous—free from [sin!

Beloved Country, thou art blest,
For the noble cause of Righteousness,
Thy sons have proved their valiant [blood,

Their courage, their aims and desires!
They swam thro' the awful flood,
But now they reign up higher!
In the mansions prepared above the [skies,

O Canada, thy supremacy forever more [abides!

WANTED---MEN !

Give us men, a time like this demands, strong minds, great hearts, true faith, and ready hands.

Men, whom the lust of office does not kill, men, whom the spoils of office cannot buy. men who possess opinions and a will. men, who have honor. Men who will not lie. men, who stand before a demagogue and scorn his treacherous flatteries without winking. All men, sun-crowned who live above the fog of public duty and in private thinking.

Out Banquet and Presentation of Colors.

A very interesting event took place at the Sunday School of St. Andrew's Church last Monday evening when the Scouts and Rev. Mr. Howard gave a supper to the Scout Committee, Clergy, members of the Legal Profession and Country Officials; and the local Chapter I.O.D.E. presented colors and patrol flags to the Scouts.

It was the intention of the Scouts to wait upon their guests during the night, but the ladies of the congregation who prepared the delicacies insisted upon the boys partaking of it with the gentleman and they finally attended to the wants of all.

Eyvel the Scout-master, who acted as Chairman, called upon the gymen and Lawyers for speeches, responded with warm words of praise of the Scouts mingled with good advice, and appreciation of Howard's work, which has raised the Napanee patrol to its present good standing, and of regret at his coming departure. Mr. Howard was then called for and made an interesting speech giving an encouraging account of the Scout movement in Napanee, with some hearty words of appreciation of those gentlemen who were associated with him in the work—especially Dr. Campbell who given so much of his time to the re-education of the boys in first aid, other things medical necessary to development of an efficient scout. Howard said that he was not bidding the scouts or his congregation well, for he intended to return to them, and hoped to go out camping with the boys this summer.

The latter portion of the evening was given up to the ladies, and Mrs. Shaw Regent of the United Empire Loyalist Chapter I.O.D.E. opened her proceedings with the following address.

As Regent of the U.E.L. Chaplain of the Daughters of the Empire in Napanee, the Leader of the Troop has bid me to say a few words to the Scouts, in view of the fact that some are with you this evening to participate in the official farewell you are taking of Dr. Howard, (which we esteem most highly) and to encourage you, as far as lies in our power—in the objects of organization—in which we are only following lead taken by other Chapters of Order; for, Daughters of the Empire over the Dominion have ever been to encourage the Boy Scout movement. Indeed how could they be doing all that is possible to assist an organization? for anyone winning anything of its principles can fail to be convinced of the value of its principles to the growing boy—in consequences, to the community at large.

Living up to the Scout Law, you

Frank Davern Remembered.

As an evidence of the respect and popularity, and as a token of the patriotic enthusiasm of his many friends young and old, it was intended through the initiation of the altar boys of St. Patrick's church, to tender Master Frank Davern a reception in their Library hall last Sunday evening before leaving for foreign service as a smaller in the 21st regiment, and to which the whole congregation and his friends were to have been invited. Unhappily a sudden call for his immediate departure with the whole regiment, prevented its realization. The following address indicative of the feelings, of his friends, and they are legion, to whom his splendid character and generous disposition was so well known, was privately and hurriedly presented to him in the Presbytery last Monday evening accompanied by a beautiful wrist watch and a purse of money. Following is the address :

To Master Frank Davern :—Your conferees of the sanctuary, prompted by the kind and thoughtful suggestion of our beloved pastor, and encouraged by a substantial and generous response on the part of the congregation, young and old; all deeply moved by feelings of grief and pride at the news of your enlistment in the army as signaller, and your near departure to the battle front in the world's most terrible war; take the early occasion to voice the sincere appreciation of pastor and people for the faithful services you have so long rendered in the Church and on the altar, and also to express the general admiration of your manly and exemplary behaviour in and without the Church.

The world, Frank, is governed by its ideals, and so far in your young life you have left the impress for good, worthy indeed of imitation. Your courteous and polite manners, your respectful deference to your superiors and elders, your willing readiness to co-operate in church work and entertainments, your pleasing and unassuming manner in so doing has impressed and edified your comrades and will serve as an incentive to emulate; but above all your devoted love and attachment to your mother so favorably commented upon has touched the hearts of all and stamped your character with a nobleness and dignity that augurs well for your future. The motives that draw you away from her loving care and brings to her motherly heart the pain of separation are known to God and your spiritual adviser alone. They are too sacred too pure to comment upon here, but which in due time cannot help to merit the reward and blessing of God.

The decision you have made to uphold the honor and cause of your country's flag is an honorable one, but at the same time it marks a very important event in your life and is intimately associated with your temporal and eternal welfare. Only the consciousness of the justice of our cause and the interest of truth, honor, and freedom could justify the sacrifice you are making. We believe our cause is not only a national cause, but the cause of all humanity, of progress in all that uplifts the human race, enlarges freedom and advances civilization's banner of light. We shall share dear Frank, in your dear mother's loving anxiety and will watch with equal interest your future welfare. Let the faith and teaching of your holy religion direct you in all your actions and you will not be disappointed in your hopes. You will find in it comfort in your hour of trial and it will be a source of strength, joy and consolation, at the close of life. Accept, Frank, this wrist watch and purse from the loving friends of St. Patrick's congregation as a slight remembrance of their affection and high regard for you.

Signed :—

STIRRING STORY OF DUEL AT SEA

ROTTERDAM, May 3.—A stirring story of British pluck in a duel between a lightly armed mine-sweeper, Mauri of Cardiff, and a German destroyer that was forced to fly to shore for safety after being rammed is told by H. Larson, second officer of the Norwegian steamer Larson, who was full of praise for the seamanship and bravery of those on the Mauri. He said:

"At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when he was between Galloper and North Hinder Lightships, two German destroyers came alongside. The officer asked us where we were from and where bound. I told him London to Rotterdam, and he told me to go ahead. Then I saw three British mine-sweepers. The Germans went for them at full speed. Two of the British vessels, which seemed to be faster went off in one direction with one destroyer after them, and the third minesweeper dashed off followed by the other destroyer. After a short chase the destroyer, which was overhauling the single trawler Marui, started firing. I do not know whether the Germans were surprised, but I certainly was when I saw the trawler return the fire. They were fine shots, too. Nearly all seemed to hit the German, and those that missed were very near. They both blazed away as hard as they could for a quarter of an hour. The trawler was too far away for me to see whether she was being hit. Then the destroyer came up nearly alongside, and I expected to see the trawler torpedoed, but before the German realized it the trawler put her helm hard over and crashed head on into the destroyer. I saw the bridge of the destroyer fall overboard and five men on it drop into the sea. The destroyer had enough, and to my surprise just turned round and without waiting to pick up any of her men in the sea, made off as fast as she could in the direction of Zebrugge. She never fired another shot."

Canadian Losses 6,000 Is Official Admission Foe Numbered 100,000.

Ottawa, May 3.—Further light is shed on the heroism of the Canadian forces at Langemarck by a report issued by the minister of militia to-day. Worst fears as to the extent of the losses are confirmed, as the casualties admitted approach six thousand.

The attacking German host is estimated to have been at least 100,000. The Canadians, tho fairly overwhelmed numerically, made one of the finest stands in the annals of war. Lacking reinforcements, exposed to unceasing fire and poisonous fumes, they repulsed attack after attack and only ceded ground under the irresistible pressure of the huge assailing force.

Whether the Highland Brigade (13th and 14th battalions) was annihilated is not definitely known. It is believed that after being cut off, the men fought as long as a cartridge remained.

ON EXTREME LEFT.

The situation on the 22nd, therefore, appears to have been that the Canadians held the extreme left of the British line, covering a front of 5000 yards, or about three miles. To their left were the French, and again to left of the French were the Belgians. It is understood there was a main line of trenches with a supporting line a short distance in the rear.

The first brigade, as stated, was some miles to the rear in reserve.

The guns were posted far to the rear. Four heavy Canadian guns, it seems, were some two or three miles in rear of the French lines.

EMISSION OF GAS.

On the afternoon of the 22nd, following a prolonged and terrific artillery fire, the enemy's trenches being on an average of about two hundred yards from the allied line, and the wind being from the enemy's direction towards the allied line, dense volumes of heavy gas were projected towards the allied line evidently by compression thru tubing, and upon reaching the allied trenches were found to be asphyxiating. It is generally supposed chlorine was principally used. The fumes seemed to have enveloped all the French front, and part of the Highland brigade, and in many instances proved immediately deadly, in other cases completely disabled the soldiers, while in others the effect was only temporary.

TEN GERMAN DIVISIONS.

Immediately thereafter the whole German force, made up, it is estimated, of upwards of ten divisions, advanced.

The French and Belgians, over a front of nine thousand yards, or upwards of five miles, gave way—indeed many of them were completely prostrated and incapable of action. This portion of the line fell back beyond the canal, in some cases a distance of ten thousand yards, or about 6 miles. By the sudden retirement of the French the heavy Canadian guns in their rear had not time to get away, and consequently for the time being, fell into the hands of the enemy.

HIGHLANDERS HARD PRESSED.

Meantime, the Highlanders being left without any protection on their left flank, General Turner extended his force for about two thousand five hundred yards, at right angles to his original front to prevent, as far as possible, the German divisions, which were pouring in, in overwhelming numbers, from completely cutting the Canadians off by enveloping them from the rear. Thus the Highlanders had to cover a rectangular front of about five thousand yards, the latter

THIRTEEN BELGIAN REFUGEES ARRIVE

Thirteen Belgian refugees arrived in Toronto last Sunday. They came by way of England, under the direction of Cardinal Mercier of Belgium. Cardinal Mercier had been in communication with the archbishop of Toronto, who told the Belgian cardinal to send them to Toronto, and he would care for them.

When they arrived at the Union Station they were met by Father Castex, representing the archbishop; R. P. Gough, Gordon Taylor and Tom Flanagan. Mr. Flanagan took them to his hotel, the Grand Central, where they will remain as his guests until employment is found for them.

The names of the refugees are: Francois Joseph Justin, who is an automobile mechanic, his wife and two infant sons; Joseph Verboven, an electric car fitter, his wife; Emile and three infant daughters, and two Sauts Marachell, a farmer, his wife brothers Gerrard and Alphonse Bruynell, both clerks. The Verbovens and the two Bruynell brothers are from Antwerp, and the rest from Brussels, or near by.

STARVED AND KILLED PRIEST

Madame Justin tells of some awful atrocities committed by the German soldiers after the taking of the village she lived in.

"The Germans came into the village of Aerschot, in which we lived, and herded 150 women and children into my father's garden," Madame Justin said, "and then they proceeded to bayonet or shoot down the men. They took the priest, who protested against the slaughter, and tied him to a tree. They left him there for one and half days. Then they took him and shot him and threw his body into a well."

"After the Germans had finished their work, they ordered the women to bury the men. Most of the bodies were thrown into wells. An old woman, the housekeeper of the priest, attempted to give food to her master, but the Germans took her and killed her and threw her into a well also."

The Marachell family escaped from Brussels disguised as peasants. They concealed the children by putting them into carts drawn by dogs.

The Germans continually demanded food and drink from the Marachells. They had nine barrels of old wine in their cellar, and they were compelled to give everything up to the German soldiers. After two nights' revelry the soldiers got drunk. They then seized their opportunity to escape.

While Justin was fighting in the trenches early in the war, a Belgian soldier was shot in the arm by a German sharpshooter. King Albert of Belgium immediately jumped into the trench and took the position, and remained there until the soldier had his arm bandaged. Justin was wounded in action, and was sent to a base hospital. Then he was sent to England, and fortunately joined his wife there.

Others in the party related some very dastardly deeds done by the German soldiers in their invasion of Belgium, but the above were the only stories they could vouch for personally.

fell into the hands of the enemy. HIGHLANDERS HARD PRESSED.

Thus the Highlanders had to cover a rectangular front of about five thousand yards, the latter part of which was in the open. It appears this fight lasted thruout the afternoon and night.

RECAPTURE OF GUNS.

On Friday morning, the Tenth Battalion, under the gallant Colonel Boyle and Major McLaren, both of whom fell, and the Sixteenth Canadian Highlanders, made a desperate attack on the German position and recaptured the four guns. They were supported by the Second Eastern Battalion under Colonel Dave Watson, and the Queen's Own, under Col. Reunie.

TEN TIMES OUTNUMBERED.

This was the position up to the forenoon of Friday, the 23rd. With the Canadian Highlanders extended to double their normal trench front, one-half of it in the open, and assisted by the 10th Battalion from Southern Alberta, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, they not only held ten times their own number in check, but they actually retook the guns from their enemy and maintained their position, but the loss, as must have been expected, was appalling.

MERCER'S BRILLIANT CHARGE.

However, the Germans had advanced six miles to the rear of the French position, and there seemed nothing to prevent their getting in behind the Canadian line, greatly extended tho it was, and terribly diminished. Accordingly another brilliant charge was carried out at some German trenches to the rear of the former French position, and r General Mercer, with the first and fourth battalions of the first brigade, supported by the second and third, and the German trenches, temporarily erected, were recaptured. In this movement two British brigades also took part, as well as the remainder of the Canadians.

FELL BACK GRADUALLY.

Meantime the enemy concentrated several divisions on the rectangle in the Highland brigade, that is the extreme left of their original position. The troops in the trenches were able to hold firm, against great odds, but the scattered fragments holding the line, in the open at right angles to the trenches, were obliged to fall back gradually before vastly superior numbers.

LONDON, May 4.—"I am of opinion, that the enemy has definitely decided to use these gases as a normal procedure, and that protests are useless."

This is the concluding sentence of report by Sir John French on the use of poisonous fumes by the Germans. In it he says:

"The effect of this poison is merely disabling or painlessly fatal as has been suggested in the German press. Those victims who do not succumb on the field and who can be brought into hospitals suffer acute and a large proportion of the casualties a painful and lingering death."

"Those who survive are in little better shape, as the injury to the lungs appears to be of a permanent character and reduces them to a condition which points to their being invalids for life. These effects must have been well known to the German scientists who devised the new weapon and to the military authorities who sanctioned its use."

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A SHAM SHOE

In the battle thunder do not forget me. If I did not distinguished myself at Neuve Chapelle and Langemarck it was not my fault. I was willing enough but I never had a chance. I am one of the sham shoes.

My twin—I am surviving member of a pair—was incinerated with a lot of other garbage at Salisbury Plain, but I escaped to Canada through the good offices of the captain, who was anxious to show the parliamentary committee what the profit-taking patriots were putting over in the way of shoes for the soldiers. His language as he tied me up and ticketed me was quite unfit to print. The mildest thing he said was "Damn!"

I was born somewhere in August, 1914, at a shoe factory in Montreal. The auspices were, happy. My godfather, who is a director and heavy shareholder in the business gave a rattling start. He looked me over, I remember, and said something about every peg riveting the Empire more firmly together. My Godfather is a pleasing speaker who sees sermons in stones, books in the running brooks and metaphors in everything.

He has a patriotic lecture which has been successful at many tea meetings and he is so intensely dedicated to public life on the highest moral plane that he has no time to bother himself with sordid details. This probably explains why I went to the bad in short order although I was the object of a man's prayers at the outset. Too much prayer, perhaps, and too little real leather. At any rate I didn't last. I hadn't the stuff in me. I am not blaming my godfather. He is a fine man and evidently has friends on the committee who will not let the breath of scandal touch his name. What I am saying is that he doesn't get down to brass tacks. He is so unwordly that he doesn't want to know how his shoes or his dividends are made.

If you ask me, I would say that the factory superintendent is the man who is responsible for my weakened constitution. After prayer was over I heard him give orders to the head formen. "Bill," he said, "loyalty is one thing and three dollars and eighty-five cents a pair is another. We'll have to do the best we can for the firm."

After that there was a highly technical conversation, which, being no anatomist, I did not understand, but I heard Bill say, "We can make sixty cents a pair if we use split leather instead of storm calf," and the superintendent replied, "Well let it go at that." Then they both winked and I had a feeling that I was being humbugged. As far as I could see, I was a healthy outdoor tan, but somehow or other I knew that the elements of strength were lacking.

My twin brother and I passed the inspection with flying colors. There were three inspectors and they were paid by the Government not to hurt our feelings. One inspector, who knew something about leather, took me up and said "Humph!" He passed me on to the second inspector who knew as much about shoes as I do about glass-blowing, and he said "Good." The third inspector, who knew still less, said "Very good!" and the ordeal was over. My brother and I had been taken from the middle of a stack of shoes as a fair sample and the other thousand pairs were passed, so to speak, on our recommendation. At all events, none of those shoes were examined in my presence and no shoes

LONDON, May 2.—Sir Max Aitken, Canadian eye-witness, who arrived here from Belgium on Friday night, brought with him the official despatch which so ably describes the heroic achievements of the sons of Canada at Ypres.

During the week-end this thrilling story has formed the sole topic of conversation in the clubs and in the hotels and service circles. The Saturday evening papers made it the subject of special display. The Sunday papers, both London and provincial, reproduced the story in full today.

In the opinion of military writers here, the despatch of the Canadian eye-witness is one of the most enough after that to hear what we had done to Private Jones. He came down with pneumonia, had to be sent back to a base hospital and had a deuce of a time altogether. The poor fellow had started out on a career of glory but my brother and I did a lot to put him off the track. I am glad to hear that he is fighting in Flanders now and that he has a new pair of shoes that will help him more than I did.

My brother, as I said before, found his way to the parbage pile, but I was lucky enough to come under the notice of General Alderson, who had just cabled that the shoes were rotten and had received a reply from the Minister of Militia that a consignment of overshoes was being sent to replace them.

"These colonials," the General said, with a grim smile, "have a queer sense of humor. Captain Brown," he said, turning to his adjutant, "you might cable back that all the overshoes in the world will not take the place of the regulation army shoe, or words to that effect. Bundle up a few of these shoes and send them along as Exhibit A."

And that's how I came to revisit Ottawa and appear before the parliamentary committee. I never expected to see my native land and my high-minded godfather again. I have seen both and I can die happy now that I have had a chance of telling what I think of them. I can't say that I have enjoyed myself for the last six weeks tied up with hundreds of others as dilapidated as myself. We're an awful mess. The lawyer for the defence never looks on us. Neither does Chairman Middlebro nor the other Conservative members of the committee. I can never convince them because they won't let me, but Mr. Murphy and Colonel Macdonald have taken up my case and I don't doubt I'll get justice in the minority report.

Meanwhile, if it wasn't such a serious matter I could laugh at some of the arguments that are being made

Appeal of Belgium to Canada.

The following poem was written by Miss Hazel Alyea, a talented young lady of Bay City, Mich. It was composed for the operetta, "The Courtship of Miss Canada."

Fair Canada no wooer I, me you only see
A Belgium with unconquered heart,
who prays for liberty,
I, Belgium, do not come to woo, I only supplicate
Fair Canada's assistance, as I stand outside your gate.

Fair Canada, no wealth I hold within my outstretched hand,
But I implore your pity, upon my ruined land,
Where more than six million people, await the help you bring
We know your heart is with our cause, for England and your King.

Widowed Belgium mothers and helpless children too,
Turn tearful eyes on Canada to see what she will do.
To help them, in their hour of trial, whose dear ones have been slain
To check the Kaiser ruthless course, to break a despot's chain.

Fair Canada, assistance give, with all your loyal heart,
And, in return, I, at your feet place Belgium's soul of art,
Her galleries, and dainty lace, music and architecture so grand
The wisdom of past centuries are all at your command.

reunions. One inspector, who knew something about leather, took me up and said "Humph!" He passed me on to the second inspector who knew as much about shoes as I do about glass-blowing, and he said "Good!" The third inspector, who knew still less, said "Very good!" and the ordeal was over. My brother and I had been taken from the middle of a stack of shoes as a fair sample and the other thousand pairs were passed, so to speak, on our recommendation. At all events, none of those shoes were examined in my presence and no shoes were pulled to pieces by the inspectors. They were nice, kind inspectors and they didn't want to cut shoes up, which is a way some inspectors have when they are anxious to get at the inside of a bad job. Our inspectors were not that sort. Any cutting up there was to do they left to the field of battle.

While we were "in stores" my brother and I heard many startling tales. They are old stories now so I will not repeat them. The worst one was that a Halifax regiment had been obliged to parade with shingles tied to their feet, the shoes they been served with having gone to pieces inside of two weeks. I could hardly believe it at the time and I have since heard Major General Sam Hughes deny the facts and call the officer who made the statement a liar. But that does not settle it in my mind. I know the Major General's airy way of brushing aside disagreeable truths and my own experience teaches me not to regard his as the last word. I'll go on believing my own eyes—I used to have a dozen of 'em before they got ripped out—before I'll believe the Major General.

Luckily my brother and I were not served out until the troops were leaving Valcartier Camp. As the Atlantic Ocean is not hard on shoes we were in fine condition on reaching Salisbury Plain. The feet we honored belonged to Private Jones of the Umpty Umph and he was proud of us for as much as two parades. After that came a route march and when Private Jones returned from a ten mile tramp we had both turned black from sheer mortification. The remainder of our able-bodied existence was not quite a month and we never got our healthy color back, although Private Jones polished and greased and rubbed and gave us plenty of complexion food.

About the third week on Salisbury Plain, the hardships began to tell. You will notice that there are three black bars on my instep. That was when Private Jones tried to dry me out at a stove. I have since heard the lawyer for the defence argue before the committee that a shoe has to let water in before it can let water out and that the free circulation of water is a good thing for a soldier's shoe. But Private Jones did not think that way. He was mortally afraid of wet feet and whenever I filled up with water he made it a point of bailing me out. Finally, it got to a stage where he couldn't exclude the weather any longer and when my split leather sides glued together by hydraulic pressure melted away one slushy afternoon, he almost despaired. However, he was a good soldier and he stuck to me as long as he could. It was only when my eyes gave out, and my heel went back on me and the front half of my sole came off in the mud that he took his courage in his hands and went down to the village and bought a new pair out of my own pay. Of course my twin brother was in as bad shape as I was. Both our soles were as rotten as a novel by Gabriel D'annunzio.

We kicked around the hut long

Meanwhile, if it wasn't such a serious matter I could laugh at some of the arguments that are being put up. One man had the nerve to say that the soldiers had tender feet and that was why they had to have tender shoes. They were tender enough—I can vouch for that—so tender that they fell apart without boiling, but I don't think tenderness is a military quality. Another man swore that the shoes were all right but that the soldiers' toe nails were too long and waggled through. He suggested that the medical examination should be extended to bar soldiers with long toe nails. Can you beat that?

I have little left to live for but I am in hopes to serve my country yet. My wish is to fall into the hands of a Liberal candidate and accompany him through the next election campaign. He needn't make any speeches. If he will just place me on the table along with the water pitcher and the presentation bouquet, I will do all the talking.

Canadian Recommended For Military Honors

LONDON, May 4.—Lance-Corporal Guthrie of the 7th Battalion, Canadian Infantry, has been recommended for military honor for bravely displayed near Ypres during its heavy bombardment by the Germans. Guthrie, it is stated, showed extraordinary coolness while attending the wounded men under particularly heavy fire. A shell landed on a dug-out in which three men were sleeping. All three were wounded, one so severely as to be unable to move. Guthrie spotted them, and leaving a place of comparative safety, went out where the shells were dropping, and after binding up the wounds of two of the men, carried the other to a place of safety.

But now, though he was an unconscious of the fact, he went no more alone.

His shadow in the moonlight kept him company upon the sands; and above, on the edge of the bluffs, another shadow moved on parallel course and at a pace sedulously patterned after his.

He found his sweetheart and his friend much as he had left them, with this difference—that Mr. Barcus now lay flat on his back and snoring lustily.

He was awakened quickly enough, however, by Alan's news.

But when it was the turn of Rose—they faltered. She lay so still, betrayed her exhaustion so patently in every line of her unconscious posture, as well as in the sharp pallor of her face upturned to the moon, that it seemed scarcely less than downright inhumanity to disturb her.

None the less, it had to be done. Alan hardened his heart with the reminder of their urgent necessity, and eventually brought her to with the aid of a few drops of brandy.

Between them, they helped her up the beach, past the point, and at length to the door of the hotel, where—reanimated by the mere promise of food—Rose disengaged their arms and entered without more assistance; while Barcus was deterred from treading her heels in his own famished eagerness, by the hand of Alan falling heavily upon his arm.

"Wait!" the latter admonished in a half-whisper. "Look there!"

Barcus followed the direction of his gesture—and was transfixed by the sight of a rocket spearing into the night-draped sky from a point invisible beyond the headland of the light-house.

The two consulted one another with startled and fearful eyes.

As with one voice they murmured one word: "Judith!" To this Alan added gravely: "Or some spy of hers!"

Then rousing, Alan released his friend, with a smart shove urging him across the threshold of the hotel.

"Go on," he insisted, "join Rose and get your supper. I'll be with you as soon as I can arrange for a boat. Tell her nothing more than that—that I thought it unwise to wait until everybody was abed before looking round."

He turned to find his landlord approaching from the direction of the hotel barroom. And for the time it seemed that the wind of their luck must have veered to a favoring quarter; for the question was barely uttered before the landlord lifted a willing voice and hailed a fellow townsman idling nearby.

"Hey, Jake—come here!"

Introduced as Mr. Breed, Jake pleaded guilty to ownership of the

At this Alan sat up with a start.

Back against the loom of the Elizabeth islands through, which they had navigated while he nodded, shone the milk-white sails of an able schooner.

Sheets all taut and every inch of canvas fat with the beam wind, she footed it merrily in their wake—a silver jet spouting from her cutwater.

CHAPTER XX.

Hell-Fire.

But by this stage in his history Mr. Law had arrived at a state of mind immune to surprise at the discovery that he had once more failed to elude the vigilance and pertinacity of the woman who sought his life.

He viewed the schooner with no more display of emotion than resided in narrowing eyelids and a tightening of the muscles about his mouth.

"Much farther to go?" he inquired presently, in a colorless voice.

"At our present pace—say, two hours."

"And will that enable us to hold our own?"

"Just about," Barcus allowed, squinting critically at the chase; "she's some footer, that schooner; and this is just the wind she likes best."

"How much lead have we got?"

"A mile or so—none too much."

"Anything to be done to mend matters?"

"Nothing—but pray, if you remember how."

In the end they made it by a narrow margin. The face of Judith Trine was distinctly revealed by the chill gray light of early dawn to those aboard the power cruiser as she swept up through the reaches of New Bedford harbor and aimed for the first wharf that promised a fair landing on the main waterfront of the city.

There was neither a policeman nor a watchman of any sort in sight.

Nor was there, for all his hopes and prayers, based on the telegram to Digby, a sign of a motor car.

Still, not much of the street was revealed. The docks on either hand were walled and roofed, cutting off the view.

If they ran for it, they must surely be overhauled. Something must be done to hinder the crew of the schooner from landing.

"Here!" he cried sharply to Barcus. "You take Rose and hurry to the street and find that motor-car. I know she's there. Digby never failed me yet!"

"But you—"

"Don't waste time worrying about me. I'll be with you in three shakes. I'm only going to put a spoke in Judith's wheel. I've got a scheme!"

As for his scheme—he had none other than to give them battle, to sacrifice himself if need be, to make sure the escape of Rose.

Barcus—his senses still reeling from the concussion of that thunderbolt which he had so unwittingly loosed—the cloud of sulphurous smoke and yet dissipated by the wind.

Judith lay at his feet, stunned; and round about other figures of men insensible, if not, for all he could say, dead.

And then Barcus was hustling him unceremoniously down the wharf.

"Come! Come!" he rallied Alan. "Pull yourself together and keep a stiff upper lip. Rose is waiting in the car, and if you don't want to be arrested you'll stir your stumps, my son! That explosion is going to bring the worthy burghers of New Bedford buzzing round our ears like a swarm of hornets!"

His prediction was justified even before it was made; already the nearby dwellings were vomiting half-clothed humanity; already a score of people were galloping down toward the head of the wharf; and in their number a policeman appeared as if by magic.

And while the man hesitated Alan grabbed him by the shoulder, threw him bodily from the car, dropped into his seat, cried a warning to Rose, and threw in the clutch. The machine responded without a jar; they were a hundred feet distant from the scene of the accident before Alan was fairly settled in his place.

As he grew more and more calm, he congratulated himself on having drawn an excellent car in the lottery of chance. It was light, but the motor ran famously, and if not capable of a racing pace it would serve his ends as speedily as was consistent with reasonable care for the life of the woman he loved.

Yet his congratulations were premature; they were not ten minutes out of the environs of the city when Rose left her seat and knelt behind him, to communicate the intelligence that they were already being pursued.

A heavy touring car, she said it was, driven by a man, a woman in the seat by his side—Judith the latter, the man an old employe of her father's by the name of Marrophat.

Marrophat!

Alan remembered that one.

He could only trust in his skill as a driver, and skill is the lesser factor in such a race.

They could overtake the fugitives practically when they would.

But for some weird, incomprehensible reason they chose to hang a certain distance in the rear, a distance that could readily be bridged by two minutes of furious driving.

Why?

In the succeeding quarter-hour the calmness of fatalism became Alan's. They were biding their time for some secret and fatal purpose. The blow was predestined to fall, but cruelly deferred.

For his own part, he drove like an exceptionally cunning madman.

And then, quite clearly, he recognized the time and the place and the character of the road that lay before him as the car sped like a dragon-fly down a slight grade.

From the bottom of the grade it swung away in a wide, graceful curve, bordered for some distance by railroad tracks on a slightly lower level.

He had guessed the fiendish plan of the other driver only too truly.

As they approached at express speed the stretch where the road par-from his chest. He saw a man clinging Rose from under the machine and saw that the man was Marrophat. And almost immediately someone ed his head and shoulders, caught with two hands beneath his arm and drew him clear of the machine. And the face of his rescuer was face of Judith Trine.

The crash he had expected, of car being crumpled up by the oncoming locomotive, did not follow.

As he scrambled to his feet, his glance was up the track, and discerned the train slowing to a halt.

His next was one of wonder for countenance of Judith Trine as stood, at a little distance, regarding him; her look almost illegible, a curious compound of passions coloring relief, regret, hatred, love.

His third glance descried by her the figures of Marrophat carry Rose in his arms, stumbling as he toward his car on the highroad.

He moved precipitately to pounce but found his way barred by Judith. "No!" she cried violently. "No, shall not—!"

Her hand sought the grip of a revolver that protruded from her pocket. With a short, hysterical gasp, he ran to the car.

"What!" he taunted her—"again!" "Think what you like!" she cried a frenzy. "You saved me once—no spare you. We're quits. But no time—"

"O—rot!" he interjected. "You" never have the courage to pull the trigger when I'm helpless in your hands!"

The hot blood mantled her exquisite face like red fire. She caught her breath with a sob, then flung wild at him:

"Well, if you must know—it's true I can't bring myself to kill you. I would to God I could. But I can't. For all that, you shall die—I could not save you if I would! And this I promise you—you shall never see Rose

And for the time it seemed that the wind of their luck must have veered to a favoring quarter; for the question was barely uttered before the landlord lifted a willing voice and hailed a fellow townsman idling nearby.

"Hey, Jake—come here!"

Introduced as Mr. Breed, Jake pleaded guilty to ownership of the fastest and stanchest power-cruiser in the adjacent waters, which he was avariciously keen to charter.

They observed haste religiously; within ten minutes they stood upon a float at the foot of a flight of wooden steps down the side of the town wharf, while the promised rowboat of Mr. Breed drew in, at most leisurely pace, to meet them.

Aboard and away from the wharf, the burden of Alan's solicitude seemed to grow lighter with every squeal of the greaseless oarlocks, with every dip and splash of the blades which, wielded by a crew of villainous countenance, brought them nearer the handsome motorboat which Mr. Breed designated as his own. It was not until Alan looked up suddenly to find Mr. Breed covering him with a revolver of most vicious character that he had the least apprehension of any danger nearer than the offing, where Judith's schooner might be lurking, waiting for its prey to come out and be devoured.

"I'll take that money-belt of yours, young feller," Mr. Breed announced, "and be quick about it—not forgetting what's in your trousers pocket!"

In the passion of his indignation Alan neglected entirely to play the game by the rules. The indifference he displayed toward the weapon was positively unprofessional—for he knocked it aside as if it had been nothing more dangerous than a straw. And in the same flutter of an eyelash he launched himself like a wildcat at the throat of Mr. Breed.

Before that one knew what was happening he had gone over the stern and had involuntarily disarmed himself as well.

The other two men made a sad business of attempting to overpower Mr. Barcus. In less than a minute they were both overboard.

"And just for this," Alan said before getting out of earshot—"I'm going to treat my party to a joy-ride in your pretty powerboat."

He concluded this speech abruptly as Barcus brought them up under the quarter of the power cruiser.

Within two minutes the motor was spinning contentedly, the mooring had been slipped, and the motorboat was heading out of the harbor.

Within five minutes she had left it well astern and was shooting rapidly westward, making nothing of the buffets of a very tolerable sea kicked up by the freshening southwesterly wind.

"My friend," observed Alan, "as our acquaintance ripens I am more and more impressed that neither of us was born to die a natural death, whether abed or at the hands of those who dislike us; but rather to be hanged as common pirates."

"You have the courage of ignorance," Barcus replied coolly; "if you'll take the trouble to glance astern I promise you a sight that will move you to suspend judgment for the time being."

"Here!" he cried sharply to Barcus. "You take Rose and hurry to the street and find that motor-car. I know she's there. Digby never failed me yet!"

"But you—"

"Don't waste time worrying about me. I'll be with you in three shakes. I'm only going to put a spoke in Judith's wheel. I've got a scheme!"

As for his scheme—he had none other than to give them battle, to sacrifice himself if need be, to make sure the escape of Rose.

Sheer luck smiled on him to this extent, that in turning his eye lighted on a four-foot length of stout, three-inch scantling, an excellently formidable club.

But soon, disarmed, his case was desperate—and there were two already safe upon the dock and others madly scrambling up to reinforce them.

Wildly he cast about for some substitute weapon, he leaped toward a small pyramid of little but heavy kegs, and seizing one, swung it overhead and cast it full-force into the midriff of his nearest enemy; so that this one doubled up convulsively, with a sickish grunt, and vanished in turn over the end of the wharf.

His fellow followed with less injury. But Alan had no time to wonder whether the man had tripped and thrown himself in his effort to escape a second hurtling keg, or had turned coward and fled. It was enough that he had returned, precipitately and heavily, to the schooner.

The keg, meeting with no resistance, pursued him even to the deck, where the force of its impact split its seams.

None of the combatants, however, Alan least of all, noticed that the powder that filtered out was black and coarse. Alan, indeed, had only the haziest notion that they were powder-kegs he used as ammunition. That they were heavy and hurt when they collided with human flesh and bone was all that interested him.

In the same breath he heard a friendly voice shout warning far up the dock, and knew that Barcus was coming to his aid.

A glance over-shoulder, too, discovered the cause of the warning; two men who had thus far escaped his attentions were maneuvering to fall upon him from behind. The bound required to evade them brought him face to face with Judith as she landed on the dock.

"Oh," she cried, "I hate you, I hate you—"

"So you've said, my dear, but—"

His final words were not audible even to himself. In his confidence (now that Barcus was taking care of the others) and his impatience with the woman, and in his perhaps unworthy wish to demonstrate conclusively how cheap he held her, Alan had tossed the pistol over the end of the wharf.

It was an old-fashioned weapon, and the force with which it struck the deck released the hammer.

Instantly the .44 cartridge blazed into the open head of a broken powder keg.

And with a roar like the trump of doom and a mighty gust of flame and smoke the decks of the schooner were riven and shattered; her masts tottered and fell . . .

And then, quite clearly, he recognized the time and the place and the character of the road that day before him as the car sped like a dragon-fly down a slight grade.

From the bottom of the grade it swung away in a wide, graceful curve, bordered for some distance by railroad tracks on a slightly lower level.

He had guessed the fiendish plan of the other driver only too truly.

As they approached at express speed the stretch where the road paralleled the tracks Alan sought to hug the left-hand side of the road, but in vain.

Roaring, with its muffler cut out, the pursuing car swept up and baffled him, bringing its right forward wheel up beside the left rear wheel of his car, then more slowly forging up until, with its weight, bulk and superior power, it forced him inch by inch to the right, toward the tracks, until his right-hand wheels left the road and ran on uneven turf, until the left-hand wheels as well lost grip on the road metal, until the car began to dip on the slope to the tracks.

He heard the far hoot-toot of a freight locomotive . . .

There followed a maniac moment, when the world was upside down. Alan's car slipped and skidded, swung sideways with frightful momentum toward the railroad tracks, caught its wheels against the ties, and . . .

The sun swung in the heavens like a ball on a string. There was a crash, a roar . . . There was nothing—oblivion . . .

The car had turned turtle, pinning Rose and Alan beneath it.

"Alan!" she gasped. "You are not killed?"

"No—not even much hurt, I fancy," he replied. "And you?"

"Not much—"

The deep-throated roar of the locomotive bellowing danger silenced him. He closed his eyes.

Then abruptly the weight was lifted

And while he stood gaping, swung from him and ran, quickly erasing the little distance between and the car.

As she jumped into this and dropped down upon the seat beside her unconscious sister, Marrophat swung car away.

It vanished in a dust-cloud as throng of railroad employes surrounded and assailed him with clamorous questions.

A bitter smile twisted his tortured features: "Then shall my will be done to him! And then, when I have seen him die as his father died—then—Ah, God!—then at last I too may die!"

There was a long silence, then a groan of exasperated protest: "Why do they not come? Why does Judith delay, when she knows how I suffer? Why have I been put off from day to day with her telegrams that begged for more time and promised everything—but told nothing!—until yesterday. . . . Where are those messages she sent me yesterday?"

His one sound hand groped out like a claw and sought a mass of papers on the desk beside him, sorting out from among them two yellow forms. Painfully he blinked over these and slowly his pain-bent lips conned their wording;

"Alan and Rose safe with me—will bring both home tomorrow night without fail," he read the first aloud; and then the second: "Have motorcar waiting for me tomorrow morning from three o'clock till called for New Bedford waterfront—Judith."

And for a long time thereafter the father, alone with the daughter who had been estranged from him since birth by every instinct of her nature, essayed in vain to break down her mutinous silence.

At last Trine summoned two of his creatures and had her led weeping from the rooms to be held prisoner in her bedchamber on the topmost floor of the house.

A Sporting Offer.

Some two hours later, that same evening, Mr. Alan Law, very much alive and, in spite of a complete new outfit of ready-made clothing, looking much more like himself than he had in a fortnight, issued forth from the Grand Central station, hailed a taxicab, and had himself conveyed to the Hotel Monolith.

But if he looked his proper self once more, it speedily was demonstrated that his wish was otherwise: for after learning from the room-clerk of the Monolith that a suite was being held in the name of Arthur Lawrence, that was the name Mr. Law inscribed on the register.

On the other hand, it was his true name that he gave to the person whom he called upon the telephone immedi-

"Chap whose boat I chartered in Portland—sheer luck on my part: he's one of the salt of the earth. First, something must be done for the boy. You've got influence of some sort in New Bedford, surely?"

Digby reflected: "Some. There's George Blaine, justice of the peace—" "The very man. Telegraph him in Barcus' interests immediately. And telegraph Barcus as well—send him a hundred for expenses, and tell him to join me here in New York as quick as he can!"

"Your friend's address?" Digby inquired, mildly ironic as he sat down at the desk and fumbled with the supply of stationery.

"New Bedford jail, of course!" Alan chuckled—but cut his laugh in two as something fluttered from the pack of envelopes which Digby had disturbed and fell to the floor between the two men.

Face up, it grinned sardonic mockery of Alan's confidence: it was a troy of hearts.

"Judith!" he cried, his great voice vibrating like a brazen bell. "At last! Where is he? You have brought him? Where is he?"

With no more answer than a sigh, the girl drooped her head and let her hands hang limply with palms exposed.

After an instant of incredulous disappointment the man shot a single, frigid question at her:

"You have failed?"

"I have failed," she confessed.

"Why?"

She shrugged slightly. "Who knows why one fails? I did my best: he was too much for me, outwitted me at every turn. Time and again I thought I had him, but always he escaped, either by his own wit and courage or with another's aid. Only yesterday night they were all three in the hollow of my hands—but now I bring you only Rose."

She faltered, awed by the glare of his infuriated eyes. "Let me explain," she begged.

He snapped her short: "You cannot explain. The thing is impossible, that you should have failed. There is something beneath this, something you will not tell me."

She endeavored to speak, but he enforced silence with a sonorous "No!" His hand sought the row of buttons on the desk and pressed one long.

Almost instantly a servant glided noiselessly into the room.

"My daughter Rose—have her brought here to me at once!"

In another moment the replica of his daughter Judith was ushered into his presence.

Upon this one he loosed the lightning of his wrath without ruth.

Rose suffered him in silence. His most galling recrimination elicited no retort from this one.

In a lull in Trine's tirade, Judith chose to interject: "Don't be so hard on the silly fool: she's not responsible; she's sick with love for that good-looking simpleton!"

"And you!" Rose turned on her passionately—"what about you? If I love Alan Law, at least I love him openly. I am not ashamed to own it—and I don't pursue him, as you do, pretending I mean to sacrifice him to a wicked family feud, and then spare him every time I meet him, to lead him to believe I haven't the heart to injure him—as you do, hoping so to work upon his sympathies and earn a kindly word and a pat on the head from his hand!"

Fiercely she leveled a denunciatory arm at her sister. "There!" she cried to her father—"if you need to know—there stands the daughter who has betrayed your faith—as I have not, who have never even pretended to approve your villainy!"

"I think," Trine announced in a voice of ice—"I have learned now what I needed to know."

His fingers sought the row of buttons; and when a servant responded, he inquired:

"Mr. Marrophat has returned?"

"He is in the waiting room, sir."

"Conduct Miss Judith to him and tell him I hold him personally responsible for her safe-keeping. He will understand."

Within another ten minutes this last was in conference with his employer:

"I think you must be out of your head," he insisted nervously, once their first greetings were over. "You might just as sensibly throw yourself from the top of the Metropolitan tower as come to New York while Trine lives and knows you're this side the water."

"Nonsense!" Alan laughed. "Remember this is New York—not the backwoods of Maine!"

Alan paused and smote his palm with a remorseful fist. "By the Eternal, I'm forgetting Barcus!"

TORTURED BY CONSTIPATION

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Paralyzed Bowels and Digestion

ST. BONIFACE DE SHAWINIGAN, QUE.
Feb. 3rd. 1914.

"It is a pleasure to me to inform you that after suffering from Chronic Constipation for 2½ years, I have been cured by 'Fruit-a-tives'." While I was a student at Berthier College, I became so ill I was forced to leave the college. Severe pains across the intestines continually tortured me and it came to a point when I could not stoop down at all, and my Digestion became paralyzed. Some one advised me to take 'Fruit-a-tives' and at once I felt a great improvement. After I had taken four or five boxes, I realized that I was completely cured and what made me glad, also, was that they were acting gently, causing no pain whatever to the bowels. ## RECKLESS DISCIPLINE.

Teaching a Scared Russian Soldier How To Face Danger.

At Sebastopol, during the siege, a Capt. Samoiloff, wishing some wine ordered an officer to send a man for it. The man, a young soldier, took the money and started on the errand. Just then, however, a French battery had concentrated its fire upon the very spot where the young man must go outside the works. He stopped and turned back.

"I wouldn't go out there for the world," he said.

An officer of course reported the act of disobedience to the captain. The captain in a rage ordered the man into his presence and demanded why he had not obeyed his order.

"I beg you to pardon me, captain, but I was terribly afraid."

"Afraid!" cried the captain. "Afraid! A Russian soldier afraid! Wait a minute. I will drive the fear out of you. Come with me."

The captain led the way to the rampart, mounted it, and there, with the bullets raining round him, began putting the man through some military exercises. The lookers on in the fort held their breath. If a hat was put on a bayonet and lifted above the walls the bullets came that way on the instant.

Not many seconds elapsed before a bullet struck the captain in the arm. He did not wince, but kept on with the drill, while the blood dripped down his hand to the wall.

Next a bullet went through the tail of the soldiers' coat, and another through his knapsack. Then suddenly the firing ceased.

The soldier begged for grace and promised to go wherever he was sent. Still the captain continued his drill. When he thought the lesson had been learned, or perhaps when his wound grew too painful, he dismissed the soldier and went himself to the surgeon and had his arm dressed.

The French explained afterward that they ceased firing out of sheer

FIGHT THE CHINCH BUG.

While worrying about foot and mouth disease don't forget the lowly little chinch bug. The state entomologist, Dr. Forbes, reports that forty-five counties in Illinois have been inspected, and it is found that the chinch bugs are now in winter quarters, ready to come out in spring and begin their depredations. The southwestern part of the state, as usual, will be most affected. With the price of grain as it is at present it is going to be worth while to get out this year and fight this chinch bug pest.

It won't do much good for one farmer to work at this job unless he has the help of his neighbors. It is a community proposition. Last year some 1,500 miles of barrier against chinch bugs was laid to protect corn-fields, and it is roughly estimated that something over a million bushels of corn was saved by it. The plans of the chinch bug are all made. What plans has your town made to thwart it?—Orange Judd Farmer.

SOY BEANS AND CORN.

Experiment In Rotation Made on Fifty Acre Clover Field.

In a fifty acre clover field thirty acres were plowed as rapidly as the hay crop was removed and immediately dragged to conserve moisture, says a contributor to the Country Gentleman. The soil was a low lying black loam and was prepared as for corn. An early variety of soy beans was planted with a two horse wheat drill, the work being finished on July 4. Alternate openings in the drill were closed, and half a bushel of seed was used to the acre.

Because of the late plowing weed growth did not bother, and all the cultivation given was with a spike tooth harrow, which was passed over the field twice in the direction of planting. Care was taken not to harrow early in the day, as the plants are quite tender until six or eight inches high.

On Oct. 10 185 spring pigs, weighing an average of ninety pounds each, were turned into the field to pasture on ripening soys and the twenty acres of second growth clover. They were also fed a light corn ration. The gains during the next two months were splendid, and $21.50 an acre in pork was realized from the soys after the market price of corn fed was deducted.

The following spring the entire fifty acre field was planted to corn. The thirty acres where soys grew were disked twice and firmed and leveled by dragging. The disking was rapidly and easily accomplished, the ground warmed early, and there was a large accumulation of crop residue from the soys and manure from the hogs. The clover sod was plowed and prepared in the usual way. The soil of the field was of like character, but there was a marked difference in the yield of corn, that on the soy bean land being much better.

The rotation followed economized labor in the spring and produces three crops—hay, soys and corn—in two years with one plowing. In a latitude

HOW SPEECH CHANGES.

English Words Are Now Very Different From What They Used to Be.

A striking characteristic of the English language is the ability its words possess of passing from one part of speech into another. In the course of its history English has been largely stripped of the endings which once characterized different parts of speech.

Our infinitives no longer end in en, the representative of an early an. We do not say tellen, still less tellan, but simply tell. Our nouns have discarded the a or e or u in which many of them terminated originally. Dropa has become "drop," ende has become "end," wudu has become "wood."

In consequence of the disappearance of the terminations, words have been reduced to their root form. Hence they pass with little difficulty from one part of speech into another. This was not so once.

Let us take our old, familiar grammatical friend love as an illustration. In Latin it is amare as a verb; as a noun it is amor. One in consequence cannot be used for the other. Such transition difference of termination completely prevents. So in our earliest English speech the noun love was lufu, the verb was lufian. Here again en could not be used for the other.

But when the substantive ending was dropped from lufu and the verbal ending from lufian the root luf alone remained. That has given the word love. This can be used indifferently either as a noun or a verb. In both cases the existing final e is of no importance. It is a mere lifeless survival which has weight only in the conventional spelling and nowhere else.—Professor Thorpe as R. Lounsbury in Harper's Magazine.

HER IDEALS CHANGED.

She Saw a Very Large Light After She Was Happily Married.

There was a girl who was quite sure that when it came her turn to marry she could not live in a house any smaller than her father's. "Love in a cottage" was not her idea. Cupid, she thought, needed plenty of room to flaunt his wings and to practice his archery. He could not pine in a birdcage. She must have an immense library with a fireplace that would take a six foot log; there must be a drawing room with parquet flooring and thick rug sliding about on it; the dining room must be able to hold a large table with an imposing bowl of flowers. She was the drill, while the blood dripped down his hand to the wall.

Next a bullet went through the tail of the soldiers' coat, and another through his knapsack. Then suddenly the firing ceased.

The soldier begged for grace and promised to go wherever he was sent. Still the captain continued his drill. When he thought the lesson had been learned, or perhaps when his wound grew too painful, he dismissed the soldier and went himself to the surgeon and had his arm dressed.

The French explained afterward that they ceased firing out of sheer astonishment at the sight of the two men exposing themselves so recklessly.

The Purple Cross.

The emblem of the Red Cross is known throughout the civilized world. More recently the Committee of Mercy, which has adopted as its insignia the white cross, has begun to make it favorably known in alleviating the miseries that follow in the wake of battle. Now we have also the Purple Cross Service, the mission of which is to mitigate the sufferings of the horses stricken in battle or worn down by the exigencies of military service. Of this organization not so much is known.

The French War Office, however, has expressed its gratitude to the Purple Cross Service for the help it offered, and has welcomed the arrangements for an organization to help wounded horses "parallel with and subordinated to that already in existence, and which is exclusively military." The assistance of the Purple Cross Service has been officially recognized as an auxiliary to the military depots already established for the care of wounded horses.

The French War Office has asked the Purple Cross to supply a large quantity of specified surgical instruments and veterinary appliances, the supply of which had been completely exhausted owing to the unparalleled need in this war.

A conference will be held in Geneva to try to broaden the scope of the Geneva conference to include horses.

A Land of Babel.

The region of Trans-Caucasia, where operations are going on between Russians and Turks, has the most curious mixture of races of any district in the world. It is, indeed, a huge ethnological museum. Of its 10,000,000 inhabitants only 500,000 are Muscovites, though all, of course, are subjects of the Czar. Four millions are Tartars, 2,000,000 Armenians, 2,000,000 Georgians and the remainder are Turks, Kurds, Persians and members of minor nationalities, varying in race, language and creed. It has been estimated that no fewer than 60 languages are current in the Caucasus between Mount Elbruz and Mount Ararat.

Tongue Twisters.

Ask your friends to say these sentences quickly:

The rain raineth and ceaseth, and the sea ceaseth not, and that sufficeth us.

A box of mixed biscuits in a mixed biscuit box.

Shoes and socks shock Susan.

She sells seashells by the seashore. The shells she sells are seashells, I'm sure. If she sells seashells by the seashore, are the shells she sells seashore shells?

dragging. The dinking was rapidly and easily accomplished, the ground warmed early, and there was a large accumulation of crop residue from the soys and manure from the hogs. The clover sod was plowed and prepared in the usual way. The soil of the field was of like character, but there was a marked difference in the yield of corn, that on the soy bean land being much better.

The rotation followed economizes labor in the spring and produces three crops—hay, soys and corn—in two years with one plowing. In a latitude no farther north than central Indiana such methods can be profitably practiced. The only objectionable feature is that too much hot, heavy work is thrown together in midsummer—corn cultivation, clover hay making, breaking clover stubble and planting soys. From the standpoint of soil improvement the method is admirable.

Sunny Winter Hog Bunk.

The A shaped hog bunk has been much improved to make comfort for the sow and her litter by the addition of enlarged doorways, hooks in the top upon which to suspend a lantern, burlap doors to inclose the quarters during a storm, glass window panes in the ends and side elevations to admit light. The accompanying cut, however, shows a good, practical plan of bunk.

It admits plenty of sunshine, for with the roof door elevated every nook and cranny is exposed to the sun of mid-day. This is fine for the sow and her litter and also prevents the nesting material from becoming damp.

The door is held up at almost any elevation by the prop shown in the upper corner, one end of which is fitted into the hole in the edge of the door and the various nails fitted over the latch bolt on one side of the bunk. This latch bolt is fitted with a key that holds the door down in case we desire to keep the animal in. The prop is hung upon a hook in the back gable when the door is closed.

Best results from this plan of bunk are secured by setting it with the door to the eastern exposure. Hinge the opposite side and keep it wide open during nice weather, as it will then get the full benefit of all winter sunshine.—Farm and Home.

O'Connell's Bull.

O'Connell, the great Irish agitator, being pestered by a stranger for his autograph, returned the following answer:

Sir—Yours requesting my autograph is received. I have been so bothered with similar impertinences that I'll be blessed if I send it. Your obedient servant.

DANIEL O'CONNELL.

Economy Tip.

"My tobacconist tells me that if I will stick my cigars in my vest pocket so that the small end is out instead of the big end I'll lose fewer cigars."

"I've a better plan than that. Stick 'em in your coat pocket so that they don't show at all."—Boston Transcript.

She visualized herself ruling a salon, hostess to a brilliant coterie of people who would help her social ambition and her husband's business.

A school friend of hers came to see her a year and a half after she had married and found her in a little frame house on a side street, ridiculously happy with her husband and her baby. The back yard was just about big enough to hold a whirling clothes frame and a narrow flower bed against the fence; the piazza was as snug as a sailor's hammock; the largest room was about the size of the vestibule of the bride's girlhood home.

"I know what you're thinking," laughed the proud little housekeeper to her guest. "You're wondering how I could make up my mind to live in this tiny piano box. But I've made a discovery. I've found that it isn't the size of the house that matters; it's the size of the heart, and the biggest hearts can live in the littlest houses."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The box, which is of delicately carved ivory, contains receptacles for paints and powders. There is also a glass container, probably used for perfumes. The box is opened by pressing a concealed spring. Under the lid is a piece of highly polished stone, which served as a mirror.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Prussian Guards.

Frederick the Great originated the Prussian guards. His ambition was to form a royal bodyguard of giants, and every country was ransacked by his agents to supply recruits. The most extravagant sums were offered to men of exceptional inches, and it is said an Irishman more than seven feet high, who was picked up by the Prussian ambassador in London, received a bounty of £1,300.—London Mail.

Most of these 38,000 Maxwells have been rained on, snowed on, and put to every kind of a rough and tumble test that time and use can give a car—and that's what we mean by the "Acid Test."

If you have any neighbors among these 38,000 happy owners, ask them to tell you all about their experience with their Maxwells.

If you don't happen to know any neighbors who own Maxwells, here are a few facts to think about—things to consider—then you can come in and see this "Wonder Car" and add up these facts for yourself.

Forget this—the Maxwell we will show you is an exact duplicate of these 38,000 Maxwells that have stood the rough and tumble "Acid Test."

And Here Are Some Vital Points to Think Of

in a Nutshell have accomplished what a few years ago many said was impossible.

The Maxwell is Not the Result of an Experiment

It was not luck or the result of an experiment on the public, but good hard business judgment that made the Maxwell of to-day possible.

Able engineers spent months designing this powerful, efficient, light-weight car. The best metallurgists in the world's famous laboratory (the Maxwell's own plant) tested materials and formulated new heat treatment that gave this car a remarkable light weight and yet the great strength which it possesses and which stands all the abuse heaped upon owner-driven cars.

It was real genius that gave to the Maxwell the powerful motor that enables Maxwell owners to go wherever four wheels will travel, over all roads, up all grades, through any sand, any mud.

Beauty and Comfort as well as Strength

And Maxwell builders added to this "wonder car," not only all the conveniences, power and durability, but also the refinements and beautiful lines of the much higher priced cars. Pure stream lines, crown fenders, fine upholstery and all the little details that make Maxwell owners proud of their car.

Every Feature of Mechanical Construction

Every feature of mechanical construction that is to be found in cars selling at many times its price will be found in the Maxwell. And in addition there are many mechanical features that are strictly of Maxwell design. We have improved the lamps, made them rattle-proof by using extra braces and eliminating the hinges, dust-proof, easy to clean and adaptable to use in any position. We have protected one of the best radiators that money can buy from the many twists and strains of the car. In fact, we have constructed a full floating radiator. Thorough lubrication and proper cooling of the motor has been given. One square inch of braking surface has been provided for every twelve pounds of weight. Our engineers have equipped the Maxwell with a spring tension fan that adjusts itself to any pressure on the belt. These are but a few of the scores of features that make the 1915 Maxwell "THE WONDER CAR."

The Maxwell Company's Guarantee of Service to Maxwell Owners

is backed by a more reliable service than that guaranteed every Maxwell owner. Scores of Maxwell dealers in every part of this to give expert advice—to make adjustments and to supply new parts at reasonable prices. Maxwell Dealers' Service Organization is perfected and completed by the great Maxwell Service Station in Windsor, Ont. The main offices Maxwell Motor Company in Detroit, U. S. A., are within comparatively short distance of many points in Canada. This in itself means prompt parts to Canadian Maxwell dealers and owners. Maxwell Service is one of the great advantages enjoyed by Maxwell owners.

Napanee Ont.

Napanee's Civic Holiday this year will fall on July 7th. This is the date for the Oddfellows' field day at Trenton. All the Oddfellows lodges in the surrounding district are co-operating to make this day of sport in Trenton, one of the biggest events this summer. An effort will also be made to have a similar event in Napanee next year.

The question of the speed of automobiles running in and through the town came in for discussion at the council meeting on Monday night. It looks as though there will have to be some regulations in reference to speed, the manner in which automobiles scoot around corners, and also the running without proper lights. Look out Mr. Automobile Man, some day you may be hailed before the "Duke" and made to settle, if you persist in taking liberties with the law.

The Calgary Daily Herald of April 24th says:—"Col. Low and Major Deroche are out to create another record in connection with the big military camp on the Sarcee Reserve equal to the World's record made with the Valscartier Rifle ranges. There will be 250 targets in one line extending about 2000 feet. Major Deroche of the Royal Canadian Engineers, Engineer in charge of construction of targets and camp on the Sarcee reserve was responsible for the great camp at Valscartier. He has just completed a large camp at Sewell, Manitoba, which has a rifle range with 500 targets. The task was completed in 10 days and Major Deroche will leave Sewell for Calgary on Sunday night, and will be accompanied by his staff of experts and should add to his laurels by completing the camp at Calgary in record time also."

CURLING.

At the Annual Meeting of the Curling Club, held at the Public Library on the 26th ult., the following officers were elected, viz:

President—Jas. Fitzpatrick.
Vice-President—J. G. Daly.
Treasurer—E. R. Checkley.
Secretary—R. A. Leonard.
Executive Committee—Messrs. C. I. Maybee, H. Daly, W. C. Smith, Paul Killorin.
Representatives to Central Ontario League—J. S. Ham and R. A. Leonard.

Auditors—E. J. Corkhill and Dr. Campbell.

A resolution of sympathy with the Belleville Club, and the brothers and sisters of the late Peter McL. Forin, was passed, and ordered sent them by the secretary.

A resolution was also passed and ordered sent to Mr. R. G. H. Travers expressing the regret of the members at his absence from the Annual Meeting for the first time for many years, and that, should he be sent to the front, which is most likely, he may come through unscathed, and that we may still have the pleasure of many games of curling with him in the future.

Although the membership of the club the past year was the smallest it has ever been, and a number of the very best curlers were unable to participate in the game, still the curling done by the seniors in particular, was of the usual high order. In the Tankard games at Toronto they probably did better than any year before, and were within a very small margin of bringing the Tankard home with them.

TRINITY CHURCH NOTES.

The services on Go-to-Church Sun- day were well attended, notwith- standing the unpleasant weather. A number of new members were receiv- ed. A large number attended the Sacramental service. On Sunday even- ing there will be a "Mothers' Day" service, for which an interesting pro- gramma has been prepared. "Mothers' Day" was originated in 1909 by Miss Anna Jarvis, of Philadelphia. The second Sunday in May was the day chosen. It is now observed in most white flower is worn in honor of the countries of the world. A mother.

House and Barn Paints, Best quali- ty at Hooper's—The Medical Hall.

Mother's Day.

What an inspiration came to the young lady in the City of Philadel- phia. When on the anniversary of the death of her mother she decided to spend the day in special thought and meditation of her. She mentioned her intention to three or four of her friends, and accordingly four young ladies spent the day in special thought of their mother's. The day proved so helpful and beneficial to them they suggested to their pastor the advisa- bility of setting aside one Sunday as a special "Mother's Day." From that the custom has spread throughout Canada and the United States until the custom is practically universal. The month is May. How fitting this is! May means Mary, and long ago this month was devoted to the memory and worship of the Virgin Mary. And then, too, every one is supposed to wear a Carnation. That too is sug- gestive. Carnations represent to us purity, beauty and endurance.

Grace Methodist Church will observe next Sunday as a special Memorial to mother. In the morning the pastor will speak on "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world"—This will be special to mother's, will all the mothers make a special effort to be present. At night the subject will be "An old fashioned home." At the eve- ning service, Miss Marion Paul will sing "Home sweet home"—There will be special music morning and evening.
